

Jack Russell, Long Way To Go over and over and places in between we all keep returning don't remember who we've been lost in our memory remnants of a time when we were together younger in the mind now i see the changes in a world going bad i see the faces remembering what we had we still got a long way to go

we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we all got a long way to go something familiar i've been here before something remembered lies beyond the door i look into eyes i've known a million years a maze of emotions brings me to tears over and over it's turning me around i look for the answers but never hear a sound
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we all got a long way to go life is a vision from the pages of a dream a journey of souls the end to all our means over and over turning us around we look to the light praying to be found
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we still got a long way to go
we all got a long way to go over and over
over and over