

Jackie Greene, Reasons To Be Free (I Don't Owe)

Cry, cry, mud in your eye Going through the reasons why Doing anything to justify,
How it got this way

Diamond necklace, diamond rings Oh how much more it stings Watching you collect your things And what you want to say oh to say yes you say that I dont owe you nothing, though I never could tell You dont need my loving, (you just get it from someone else) I just want a reason to be free from you yes I do

Too much time, and too much wine, cut a hole in this heart of mine But ill lie and say im feeling fine Sleepin in my clothes

Now I could be right, I could be wrong To think about you while Im gone Love just writes the saddest songs And thats just how it goes oh it goes and it goes

i don't owe you nothing, i never could tell that you don't need my loving (you just get it from someone else)
i just want a reason to be free from you
yes i do

now all this pain, I cant explain its like running out of cover in the pouring rain its like waving goodbye to a leaving train thats moving down the track and all I know when the day is done you cant love just anyone, it dont matter where theyre going or if theyre ever coming back coming back they aint coming back