

Jason Aldean, Lonesome USA

Drove half way to town last night an' I turned around,
In a field of fireflies makin' such a lonely sound.
As my headlights flashed on a mailbox by the road,
I realized that I was livin' in a new zip code.
Well, I'm livin' in Lonesome, USA...
Population one since yesterday.
Livin' and dyin' in the hell I made since you been gone.
Right now, my mind's in another state;
Ain't enough heart here left to break.
I'm livin' in Lonesome, Lonesome, USA.
I never knew the sound of silence could be so loud.
It's hard getting used to livin' in an empty house.
Yeah, I know I can come an' go any time I please,
But there's somethin' I miss about you waitin' up on me.
Well, I'm livin' in Lonesome, USA...
Population one since yesterday.
Livin' and dyin' in the hell I made since you been gone.
Right now, my mind's in another state;
Ain't enough heart here left to break.
I'm livin' in Lonesome, Lonesome, USA.
Hey, I could drive all night an' be right here where I am,
And still be just as lost till you come back.
Hey, I look around here an' it don't take long to see,
Oh, where I am right now's no place to be.
[Instrumental Break]
Lonesome, USA...
Population one since yesterday.
Livin' and dyin' in the hell I made since you been gone.
Right now, my mind's in another state;
Ain't enough heart here left to break.
I'm livin' in Lonesome, Lonesome, USA.
Hey, I'm livin' in Lonesome, Lonesome USA.
Hey, I'm livin' in Lonesome, Lonesome USA.
