

Jean Shepard, Just As Soon As I Get Over Loving You

I'll go out at night to old familiar places have a drink and maybe see a friend or two
And your image won't be there in all their faces
Why I won't fall apart if they should mention you
I won't spend my time forgetting or forgiving
Or lie awake and long for you the whole night through
I may even find a reason to be living just as soon as I get over loving you
I'll be in another's arms when I awaken they'll hold me just the way you used to do
And I won't think about the one whose place he's taken
Just as soon as I get over loving you just as soon as I get over loving you
