

Jennifer Chung, It's up to you

No, it's not okay when you look at me that way.
Where's your sense of judgment?
No. I'm entitled to say what I think is right from wrong.
Deep inside I knew it all along that
You don't want what's best for us.
Your problem is your lack of trust.
I know this time the fault is not mine.
You just crossed the line.
No, I don't think that I'm making a mistake,
Just because I don't want to have it your way.
And you say that you'll leave if I refuse to comply.
Then I know for sure that I will survive.
No. It's never okay for me to feel unsafe.
Where's the love you promised?
No. I'm delighted to say
even without you I am strong.
Maybe you and I just don't belong.
At first things were great and nice.
But I wasn't aware of its impossible price.
You don't want what's best for us.
The problem is your lack of trust.
I know this time the fault is not mine.
You just crossed the line.
No, I don't think that I'm making a mistake.
Just because I will not have it your way.
And you say that you'll leave if I refuse to comply.
Then I know for sure that I will survive.
So it's up to you if it's our goodbye.