

Jeremy Zucker, a dying world...

my clothes cost a lot handmade by children next year they're in a box going to a thrift store in williamsburg daydream at the house still in the shower i've heard about the drought but my Brita runneth over it's hard to place

so maybe the planet dies
maybe theres no god to hear us cry when the air starts to make us sick it's not a matter of politics somehow if we raise kids in a dying world.
i hope they'll learn to love
better than us

driving to the store 20 a gallon
might be funding war but at least my grocery bags are reuseable

somehow if we raise kids in a dying world.
