Jesse Sykes, House By The Lake

Fill your pockets full of river stones For us, deep beneath the soul On your stockings a songbird sang Alone, all alone

Oh, these things that hold onto me Drag my feet across the sky Oh, these things they don't belong to me This time, oh this time

Baby, it's time to go
To that house down by the lake
Baby, it's time to go
To that house down by the lake

A beauty all by herself Just oating peacefully Death had forgotten her Like she's, she's forgotten me
