Jessie Ware, Sam

Sit inside a railway station drinking a cup of coffee on my own Listen to the strangers conversation about children and holidays in Rome last night I sat inside a barroom I was thinking about my childhood home I think I need to talk to my mamma cause I'm about to have a child of my own and I hope I am as brave as my mother wondering what kind of mother will i be I hope she knows that I found a man far from my father save my baby and me

I am thinking about my husband for 17, the only love i know I can place no one above him so beautiful and so naïve

I not even call my fairy about the life's that's got to find me home for many years the lights are blind me but now finely hold me home
