

Jill Jones, The Ground You Walk On

You're a liar, and it took me forever
To figure that out
You could switch on a smile
Pretend to be tender
But I know now what you're all about
What a nightmare
All my friends thought you were a dream
You could switch on a smile
And seem so sincere
(Seem so sincere)
But you don't even know what that means

I don't think you'll ever understand
Did cheating on me make you feel like a man

I used to worship the ground you walk on
I did anything you wanted me to
I used to worship the ground you walk on
Now I've lost my faith in you

Sunday mornings I'd wake up and lie in bed
Watching you sleep
It was almost religious
How I believed in you
It hurt when you destroyed my belief

I don't think you'll ever understand
Did cheating on me make you feel like a man

I used to worship the ground you walk on
Didn't think I'd get by without you
Now I don't worship the ground you walk on
And I'm stronger than I knew
I'm stronger than I knew

I don't think you'll ever understand
Did cheating
Did cheating on me make you feel like a man

I used to worship the ground you walk on
I did anything you wanted me to
Now I don't worship the ground you walk on
And I'm stronger than I knew

Hey, used to worship
Worship the ground you walk on
I did anything you wanted me to
Now I don't worship the ground you walk on
And I'm stronger than I knew
Oh, I'm stronger than you knew
Than you knew
Than I knew
Than you knew
Than I knew
Oh, I'm stronger than you knew.
