

Jill Phillips, You Don't Belong Here

Hey lady sitting by yourself
I can hear them say
You don't belong here
If your man's away
Cause we believe in a love
That has no end
So you can either tough it out
Or you can live in sin

Just when I start to think they've got it all wrong
That's when I realize the truth

Maybe they're right
You don't belong here
You deserve to be where there are people who care
Instead of a world
That shouts from the high road
Saying "We love like God but you don't belong here";

Hey you with the rainbow flag
I can hear them say
You don't belong here
Not if you're gay
Although we all fall short
I guess some still believe
Some people can fall too far
For grace to reach

Just when I start to think they've got it all wrong
That's when I realize the truth

I'm not trying to decide what's right or wrong
I don't think that job is up to me
But they're selling passports to the gates of kingdom come
Like they're the ones who hold the key
But they're not

Hey you hanging on the cross
Is it really true
When they say we don't belong
You've been there too
You were a friend to the prostitutes
You were a friend to thieves
All for that your blood was shed
On calvary
