

Jim Robert, Give The World

I try to scathe the pain
But to you it's all the same
And it's just a lie
We're sitting on this beach
Desolate to each of us that's here

Though I'd give the world to save you,
Somehow you "know" that that's a lie,
And I'd like to make or break it all again.
Over all the summer nights,
When everything felt so sublime.
And I thought I would never cry again.

I stop by to say hello
Tracked two miles through all the snow
But it's no big deal
You make it oh so clear,
That you do not want me here.
Cut so deep it won't heal.

Now I found someone new
And it's all thanks to you,
For breaking my heart.
She's special like today,
And won't decide to run away
Before we even start.
