

Jimmy Dean, There Goes My Last Reason For Living

There goes my last reason for living
When you loved me I was richer than a king
Now you're gone and life is such an empty thing
The tears I try so hard to hide won't bring you back to me
And there goes my last reason for living
If pride hadn't come to rule the world you live in
And take away the meaning of forgivin'
You would have heard me say as you turned to walk away
There goes my last reason for living

Now I know I was a fool to be untrue all I want is just to make it up to you
But time's run out and I'm about to lose this someone new
And there goes my last reason for living
If pride hadn't come...
You would have heard me say...
