Jimmy Dean, Weakness In A Man

Funny how you've changed it makes me wonder have I ever really known you How could you abuse the kindeness and all the tenderness that I've shown you If I have known then I have shown the strenght

On which my love could make a stand But you've mistaken tenderness and kindness for the weakness in a man I can give you almost anything if I know what you're looking for I can give you everything that any other man can maybe more He may promise you the world but I can give you everything he can So don't mistake my tenderness for any sign of weakness in your man

I may live my life alone with walls of stone inside some prison cell But no man's gonna take the love I own and never live to tell a tale So don't forsake the love we knew cause now you know exactly where I stand And don't mistake my tenderness for any sign of weakness in your man No mind mistake of tenderness no sighn of weakness in your man
