Joan Armatrading, Your Letter

I read your letter yesterday If fell between the covers And my bare skin It fell between my crying And my longing for you

I loved this one Too long This one much to much Sometimes I gave just enough of myself But most times nothing at all

And you've been gone
Too long
You know I love you the best
You call me crazy
That's how you won my heart
'Cos you were half crazy too

I read your letter again today Out loud And to myself It gave me back my sanity I didn't feel so alone

Won't be too soon
Not like the night
Not like the night on a summer's day
Can't wait to see you step across the room
Empty room
Save you and me
I feel your touches in your letters
But it's not half as good as you touching me
In real
