

Joana Zimmer, History

I never could remember what you've said
Memories kept dancing in my head
Never found a way to press rewind
And every time I put my pen in hand
My words would fall like tears in sand
I'd start again but something wasn't right
I keep running in circles
`Cause I don't know the answer
From the start of emotion, to the end of my pain
I keep searching for some light
But the darkness still stays
And so many ways
Presently, we're history
(Oh, we're history, yeah-yeah)
It was some mirage when I saw your face
Must have been a vision from another place
It saw the dream, I can't explain
Sitting by a window
Kissed by rain
It's you I want to hold and hold again
A thousand good byes later, it's the same
I keep running in circles
`Cause I don't know the answer
From the start of emotion, to the end of my pain
I keep searching for some light
But the darkness still stays
At so many ways
Presently, we're history
(Yeah, yeah, yeah)
Why, do I feel that if you could, you'd turn around
And be back for good
I wish that there was something left
For me in this world
But silence, lately is all I ever heard
I keep running in circles
`Cause I don't know the answer
From the start of emotion, to the end of my pain
I keep searching for some light
But the darkness still stays
At so many ways
Presently, we're history
(Yeah, yeah, yeah)