

Joe Purdy, Only Four Seasons

Today was a good day, it was better than most Didn't see me no demons, didn't fight with no ghosts Baby maybe we haven't gone crazy after all Theres only four seasons and even the best of us fall

She says, hold me up darling cuz i cant see straight Been drinking again, and staying up late
Hope you understand that its just that time of year Theres only four seasons but these feelings are always here

And I havent been here since i dont know when But things sure look different than they did back then They're colder now, but thats just the way that it goes
But true friends they dont change every time that the wind blows

We've been at this party a little too long been putting it down, honey don't get me wrong I just think its time that we move towards the door cuz there only four seasons and i'm looking for something more

So lets pack our bags, get out of this town head up the coast, where the wind knocks you down where the people you know are the poeple you thought that you knew Theres only four seasons and i guess i'll be leaving soon
