

Joe Wilson, If Everything Is Truly As It Should Be

singin' to an empty room i got no one to go home to it's just overkill cause i never get what i put in it's just another eyelash to the wind all the time it takes to cultivate relationships and songs with every piece of my being i try to see what they're seeing it's just another eyelash to the wind we all die a little each day there's no pill that can make that change i've no vision of heaven or hell when i've a life to live and stories to tell so every decision that life brings me is another gift that i will have to take whether simple or profound i'm lucky i'm not laying in the ground it's another eyelash to the wind so if everything is truly how it should be then everything is falling into place i got a job, i got myself i got a new lease on my health i got another eyelash to the wind