

Johan, Staring At The Sun

She took the best days of her life
She put the story in her mind
She found a place to hide all locked in herself
When she's there she's far away and no one can tell
What is written in her eyes

In her world she feels alive
With all the things that make her thrive
She found a way to capture all of her fears
When she's down she's far away then one comes near

You took the best days of her life
You broke her will and stole her pride
With all the hurt you left her burning of guilt
You became a part of her and no one can see
What is hidden in her eyes

She was never in control
All this time she's trying to pretend
But when the lights went on again
She was trying to hide
Everything inside
No one ever knew just how she died

She took the best days of her life (staring at the sun)
She left the best part in her eyes (staring at the sun)
She took the best days of her life (staring at the sun)
She left the best part in her eyes (staring at the sun)
She took the best days of her life (staring at the sun)
