John Berry, Every Time My Heart Calls Your Nam

(Gary Heyde/J.B. Rudd)

I thought that I could leave it all behind me I thought that I could make a brand new start If I had nothing to remind me it wouldn't be so hard But the voices that says it ain't over yet No matter what I do I just can't forget

Everytime my heart calls your name Your memory draws me in Just like a moth drawn to a flame I'm back in your arms again For awhile it feels like nothing's changed Everytime my heart calls your name

Starting with the very first I love you, you were all I thought about And I've been trying hard to let go of you since the moment you walked out Maybe you would never cross my mind If I could find a way to leave my heart behind

Everytime my heart calls your name Your memory draws me in Just like a moth drawn to a flame I'm back in your arms again For awhile it feels like nothing's changed Everytime my heart calls your name

Everytime my heart calls your name Your memory draws me in Just like a moth drawn to a flame I'm back in your arms again For awhile it feels like nothing's changed Everytime my heart calls your name

Everytime my heart calls your name