

John Berry, He Doesn't Even Know Her

He thinks half way is good enough
He gives her his life in bits and pieces and calls it love

How can one man have so much
And still miss the taste of such sweet wine
I'd drink it all if she were mine

{Chorus}
He doesn't know what loving her could mean
He doesn't know a single dream she dreams
He doesn't feel the rhythm of her heart
How can he stop the tears before they start
There's so much of her soul he doesn't see He'll never know how true her love can be
How can he ever give her what she needs
He doesn't even know her

I know there's a story in her eyes
I see the pages slowly fade everytime she cries

When she leaves he won't know why
He's got a diamond in his hand
He needs to save it if he can

{Chorus}

He doesn't even know her
Favorite time of day
Words that touch her and take her breath away
Theres a power that she'll never show
If he thinks she won't go

{Chorus}

That has to be the saddest thing to me
He doesn't even know her
