John Mellencamp, Large World Turning

Written by: John Mellencamp

Someday this will all be over Nothing lasts forever Thank god for change I love you now, we should stay together No one's crying about a single thing

Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can

You may sleep where your lover leads you Come and brush these crumbs from my bed Tell me the truth, I will never leave you I'll be happy by the baby's bed

Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can

When this world becomes an ocean We will find the desert Right next to the pig's tail And watch the summer sun

Corrugated roofs with little white houses Hide the dogs that walk on three legs Someday this will all be over No one's playing that pissin game

Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can Large world turning No one can see the end

Large world turning No one sees the end No one sees the end Large world turning Live while you can Live while you can
