

Julia Nunes, Still In The Room

can you tone it down while I'm still in the room I can't even look at you I avert my eyes to the floor it's like, what the hell is wrong with her you don't seem so concerned
'cause you hardly know me any more

did I, I did, I admit it can you hear me say I'm sorry but you, you care more that she knows what you did than you do that you did it to me and it's not worth the five hours it takes to explain but we are both to blame it's a complicated web there's no need to make an excuse I can take the truth but you'd rather lie instead

did I, I did, I admit it can you hear me say I'm guilty but you, you care more that they knows what you did than you do that you did it to me

I must be an idiot
'cause you're a liar and a hypocrite but just tell me you're sorry 'cause I'm willing to accept this lame apology if you just give me something to believe please give me something to believe

can you tone it down while I'm still in the room
you don't seem so concerned
'cause you hardly know me any more

can you hear me say I'm sorry

are you kidding me what is this supposed to be things were going fine just in time they were falling in line
