Jump Little Children, Yearling

I can hear you sleeping Like a softly penned letter That you plan on keeping Sound asleep next to me Under the ink of a drying sky

If I were a wordsmith
A creative license
To puncture my journals with
I would write of the site
Under my green poetic eye

I'm a yearling
A callow school boy
In the eyes of love
A pallid virgin

Just a newborn Barely breathing In the eyes of love I'm a yearling

As I share this pathos
The smothering poem
Breathes in a breath of prose
Breathe you in and again
Dizzying features of love rush by

Cause I'm a yearling A callow school boy In the eyes of love A pallid virgin

Just a newborn Barely breathing In the eyes of love I'm a yearling

Took from a book of blank verse From, from these pages I've nursed Awakened by the sleeping rhymes of love

Cause I'm a yearling A callow school boy In the eyes of love A pallid virgin

Just a new born Barely breathing In the eyes of love I'm a yearling
