

Kaledon, The Abduction

The undead King, the Jackal, invokes a creature from the Azrael's womb His cries from the high of the tower make to tremble the ground ...with his power

The clouds race to cover the sun not to let see who now walks Under the Jackal's command flies toward the golden ...towers of Kaledon he grow mist and it walks between the children of Kaledon , not seen

-IT slips into the golden castle,
-next to the Guards of the kingdom

Every cry of the children of Kaledon
it's for the dark pleasure of the fallen Angel
the pain will pierce through the heart of the Dragon, Azrael will strike hard the light's Angel...

Invisible, IT takes Antillius,
Through his talons, the power of the stone It's paralysed by the terror in the middle of the fog ...they are as alone in the same moment Carnagus shouts and roars against the sky his anger and the Kaledon' s light in the middle of the fog...is carried away...

...and without Antillius the Great,
in the streets of the kingdom the terror is spread Over one hundred thousand are taken, Over one hundred thousand in chains...

Every cry of the children of Kaledon
it's for the dark pleasure of the fallen Angel
the pain will pierce through the heart of the Dragon, Azrael will strike hard the light's Angel...
