

Karin Ann, She

she likes roses, and always sings in the car she always puts herself in someone else's skin and she doesn't like what's on tv always immersed in her dreams she asks about mine and always tells me, "you have to have some"

if someone ever
would take her to the dance floor
the world would disappear
the music would still be playing her heartbeat so loud
even after everyone is gone she'd still be dancing
dancing in her own mind

so dance with me
let the walls spin
come on dance with me
while the music's still playing
time slipped through the cracks just dance with me
before the sun comes up she likes to wander the cities she learned the streets by heart her shadow tends to be her only friend she owns a small apartment with a small door with no elevator to the 5th floor she just can't afford more

the walls are still spinning
while the music still sounds

the sun's already up
