

Kate Voegele, Unfair

the city sleeps
so silently wish I could say the same for me but Ive got this dead ended street to keep searching for a tunnel underneath the bitter truth or a bridge invisible I wont fall through and I dont know how much I can keep letting you unravel me
cause the more you learn the more we share we were worlds apart and you see it was so much easier to be cause now I know what we cant have and its so unfair I never meant most of those pretty words I said but I wanted you to think I did cause telling you all this makes no difference its useless cause those who get to know our hearts the most they always seem to be the ones well never hold
and I dont know how much I can keep
letting you unravel me
cause the more you learn the more we share
we were worlds apart and you see
it was so much easier to be
cause now I know what we cant have and its so unfair cant you see its destroying me?
I cant stand the closeness but dont you dare go avoiding me it kills me and yet it keeps me going
and I dont know how much I can keep
letting you unravel me
cause the more you learn the more we share
we were worlds apart and you see
it was so much easier to be
cause now I know what we cant have and its so unfair