

Katy Rose, Watching the rain

I wish there was a photograph that showed me here with you
And I could kiss the photograph and make my wish come true
I wish I was a humming dove so I could sing so sweet
I wish that I could steal the moon and kiss it with my feet
I wish I was a remedy that you wanted to take
A product of a recipe that no one had to bake
I wish I could forget the day the hurting in my heart
And wash our mouths with listerine to make a brand new start

Watching the rain fall down

Watching the rain

Watching the rain

Watching the rain fall down

Watching the rain

Watching the rain fall down

I wish there was a fairytale that turned into my life

So I could kiss Prince Charming man and be his princess wife

I wish the voices in my head would leave my ears alone

So my eyes could stop their water bleeding and I could find a home

I wish there was a ruby rose where I spread my wings and flew

So I could inhale the perfume and be the morning dew

I wish the raindrops on the glass would let me join their dance

I'd spin and twirl and laugh with them and drown my thoughts per-chance

Woa woa I kinda like it
