Keldian, Crusader

let it go, give up the starlanes its the final frontier we have come, out of the embers we have come to conquer another chance, a new beginning no turning back now who we are, yet undecided time to create now set our hearts alight for the stars we fly one of us will be the saviour and our souls will fly hope will never die in the heart of this crusader we are lost, the unforgiven brought our world to ruin crucified, still without penance a universe of martyrs day by day, memories fading of what used to be in our dreams it is still living and we fight for the memory set our hearts alight for the stars we fly one of us will be the saviour and our souls will fly hope will never die in the heart of this crusader