Kelly Hogan, Mighty Thin Line

I love you so much It never entered my mind You were laughing at me not with me And you'd leave me behind

I could never take you back again You know it's too late Because it's a mighty thin line Between love and hate

For a while I died inside And I cried all the time Your leaving destroyed me I forgot the sun was shining

Then one day I got hold of myself Got over you, now I feel great But it's a mighty thin line Between love and hate

Now don't get me wrong I'm not saying I hate you But I draw the line at memories that hurt me And you'll never use me again for your stepping stone Because I also draw the line between dirt and me

If I sound harsh and bitter
I don't mean to sound that way
But I'm off my knees and back on my feet
And I intend to stay that way

I you think I'll take you back again Don't hold your breath while you wait Because it's a mighty thin line Between love and hate
