

Kenny Loggins, Will It Last

I see a lion captive in the kitchen
Rolling thunder rumbles down the hall
Once in awhile, everyone paces the floor
Lately, it's more and more
Love, if you must be started go easily on your way
Still I wonder could it wait another day?

Will it last enough to say you have your freedom?
Is the answer just another road to go?
Does it have to leave to be?
Can it stay and be with me?
When will it last enough to have it here at home?

Too many roads are needlessly divided
By silent walls we build along the way
Why be alone to learn that your life has more?
That's what our love is for
Tear down those angry walls. I'll walk with you where you go
Still, you're the only one who'll ever know

Will it last enough to say you have your freedom?
Is the answer just another road to go?
Does it have to leave to be?
Or can it stay and be with me?
Will it last enough? Oh, will it last enough?
Will it last enough? Oh, will it last enough?
When will it last enough to have it here at home?
