

Kids In The Way, The End

You shut me off, and turn your back on me.
But I'll be waiting outside when you leave.
All that I can say is what I've said a million times before.
Those words, those words will never change.
And I will sing and I will scream but I can't make you hear me.
But I won't stop cause there's a chance you'll start listening.
Do you hear the music play.
Do you see the tears on my face.
The volume is dying, and like a sweet song everything will end.
You're caught up in rejecting the truth.
That you don't see the danger around you.
All that I can say is what I've said a million times before.
Those words, those words will never change.
