

King Diamond, Bye, Bye Missy

Tea time Monday night, I was waiting passing time
Then from the hallway, I saw Mother in her nightgown Swaying up the stairs, up the stairs, it seemed so unreal
I knew Grandma' had sent &quot;THEM&quot; again, the invisible friends

A little later in the middle of tea we came close to ecstasy &quot;THEY&quot; were telling tales from beyond when Grandma' rose

She opened the door, and there was Missy Seeing Mother in Grandmother's chair, she went into tears

Missy was screaming &quot;What have You done, what have you done to My Ma&quot;, crying louder now &quot;We better get rid of her, She's too young anyway&quot;, it was Grandma' who spoke

&quot;Bye, bye Missy, be gone forever
The beautiful fireplace in the kitchen will do&quot;

I saw Missy struggling in Grandma' wrinkled hands
&quot;Oh No, let me be, Oh No Please No
Grandma' Please
Aagh Grandma' You're hurting me.
Don't touch me or I'll break it, I've got the tea pot, I'll do it anyway&quot; I saw liquid spreading, the bloody tea all over the floor Now I heard &quot;THEIR&quot; voices, some kind of demon growls DIE - SHE BROKE AMON - AMON - DIE

&quot;THEY&quot; dropped &quot;THEIR&quot; tea cups, Grandma' stood still forced by invisible hands, Missy went down the stairs
As I waved her goodbye, Missy was sobbing away

Will I ever see her again, Bye bye Missy, don't be afraid