

Kirk Franklin, Outro (Hero)

I Refuse to be another black statistic
A black man who can wine and dine in the sin of the world and still be considered a christian I plan on being great, I care not to be less i refuse to wear a barcode across my chest i refuse to let a black tee or throwback jersey define me i refuse to let my children witness divorce or make mature decisions in court.
I refuse to grow up carrying a generational curse, I refuse to feel the need to curse in my verse
I hate being automatically looked at when somebody ask, can anyone rap?
I wanna be a black man who can flip it from urban to corporate measures,
A black man who doesnt gain knowlegde of the world for his own pleasures
A black man who risks life to the fullest with no regrets
My only regret is the stigma that many black statistics in the past have said, like; going to jail, bragging about bail, leaving our kids, cursing at church, Married and you still flirt, no fa
I refuse to let my people be viewed as temporary
I plan on planning on seeing enough for the moment before one is legendary,
As for statistics, my Father broke the mold and I feel its just my job for the next generation to contin
BECAUSE I REFUSE TO BE ANOTHER BLACK STATISTIC!
