

Kirsty Hawkshaw, Nature's Kingdom

Moon beauty to live and to love
In delirious bitter gardens
The vision floods under the mind sky
Night breaths, whispering symphony
After a blood sun storm
Love light relieves

With a goddess and a dream
In sleep's misty shade
With a goddess and a dream
I lie beneath imaginary worlds

Sing a true moment, recall a trip
No language can heave through life
Like an ache, a sense, the blinding wind
Making believe that if there's a sandstorm
You'll come and rescue me
Help me find my way back to the waking world

With a goddess and a dream
In sleep's misty shade
I lie beneath worlds imaginary
With a goddess and a dream
In sleep's misty shade
I'm going out to meet an old friend

The desert knows we are strangers
Until the sands of time see through our eyes
We could be lost perhaps forever
But there's space in the air
And it's ages till sunrise
