

Kobo Town, Trinity

twelve years ago and I can still clearly remember that bright day in the middle of december a world away, couldn't take my mind off her but now I wait high in the sky right above her from this glorious height I gazed with delight as the clouds that covered her like a shroud parted to reveal the sight

Chorus
and then I saw her standing there bright in the morning sun I could only stare in silent admiration allyuh I don't know why dis' land does have me so oh, I long to be back home by my Trinity i can still recall the moment I descended I thought that the years of my exile had ended face wet with tears, I ran to embrace her but she just stared past me as if I was a stranger closer to the ground wheels now touchin' down and the land I had known, claimed as my own had moved along her clothes were torn, and her shirt was all tattered her eyes downcast, every hope and joy scattered dream of my past, bright memory shattered but I adore her still 'cause I know that all that don't matter thunder in the sky water in she eye the rain soon fell as if to tell that the tears weren't only mine then I saw her standing there...