KorovaKill, Drown Symphony

The Winds blew Cuts into my Skin as I woke up just drifting aimless; Water, Water everywhere, but not a Drop to drink.

I swim exhausted reeling Streams, all Past erased, a jerking Nameless; Water, Water everywhere and several Miles to sink.

Watching for Ships somewhere passing or Islands touching the Edge of the Sea. Moving to resist this Pulling, a downward-grooving Drown Symphony

Water, Water everywhere...

The Wind brought Sound of Men on Board, a Vessel-Sign so hopeful flickering; All around & amp; all around, but nowhere Ships to see.

Waves & Damp; Skies so endless Lord, Vessel-Noise and Voices raving. From deep down they call my Name and there I sink and sink...