

Kristy Thirsk, At The Border

(Thirsk)

i sort of feel today that i could lose my way, so i won't cut a corner i'm trying to keep it straight, while on a curve of fate, i'm almost at the border she's crossing over to love, so nobody warn her
'cause she's crossing over this time with someone there i've never gone this far, held on to my guitar and all its sorrow singing i've walked on pointed fences and never dropped defences but now i'm at the border she's crossing over to love, so nobody warn her
'cause she's crossing over this time with someone there there, here, it won't matter where i am when i am found crossing over to love won't scare me with someone who's safe and sound i sort of feel today that i won't lose my way, i'm at the border she's crossing over to love, so nobody warn her
'cause she's crossing over this time with someone there she's crossing over to love, love, nobody warn her
'cause she's crossing over this time with someone there she's crossing over this time with someone there