

Kurhaus, Microphysics Of Power

ladies and gentlemen, may i have your attention please?

this is the kurhaus manifesto.

don't believe in anything you hear in a song!

don't believe in anything you read in the booklet of a record!

don't believe in anything a band says on stage!

a band is not a political organization! musicians are no political leaders!

never believe in what we say!

never trust us!

always think for yourselves.

digging out trenches on the mined playground of discursive ethics building up bunkers, pouring our mindset into concrete forms resigning ourselves to the deductive logic of dialectics

we feel so supreme, but every antithesis is just as wrong as the thesis itself in theory we are just practice

but in practice we are just theory

there is no truth and there will never be maximum dissent forever

never trust a majority or a minority that tries to become one

reality must be destroyed

turn this minefield into a dancefloor

reality must be destroyed

paint your world with your own blood on every wall you pass
