Last Winter, For All Times

When you're raining As you're going down I'll follow you under When you're storming I'll wait with you Until it's over Because I've realized that This will be The greatest of memories ever known And I hope that one day while you're looking back I'll be there For so long Walking backwards in circles And I'm finally growing I guess I should have believed That life was more than I thought it was Because you opened a new door And I love to know That you'll always be the one Who sees through Every mess I may leave you You'll be there
