Laura Branigan, Is There Anyone Here But Me

(Kevin Wells/Andre Pessis)

Sitting in La Casolette
The same place we first met
Trying to talk it out before the fall
You look the other way
I struggle for the words to say
Feels like I'm talking to the wall

I can here them play our song But somehow it sounds all wrong In a lost romance, dancing a lonely dance

With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little out of time I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me

Two silhouettes in the dark So close, so far apart Going through the motions of the past The night is coming to an end It's getting harder to pretend But still we try to keep this love alive

With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little out of time I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me

Never dreamed what we started could end like this Lovers saying goodbye with a strangers kiss

With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little out of time I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me
