Leo Sayer, The World Has Changed

though the world has changedwe're still the sameyou know that I love youthough the world has changed the months and the yearswhen I lived alonethe days were so bleakand the nights were so suddenly you were therethough I never thought about younow that the world has changedit's so stranging a secret that no onecould understandfeeling brave in my heartyet too scared to let go of you suddenly life has changedwhen you said I love youand though the words were plainit's so strangey though the world has changedwe're still the same -- I still love youthough the world has changed one night I thought that you were gonewhat could I do?runnin' around in the pouring rainlookin' for loving you when you're not thereI'm never lonely anywhereoutside the world has changedwe're the