

Level 42, Tracie

steppin' out from underneath my shadow walking home from fridays nine to five rememberin' the long way round the meadow the one we used to take from time to time I thought about you how you must have changed now baby far away from me how I used to savour all your kisses where no one else could see exchanging knowing glances across the schoolroom dreamin' of a love down by the sea changing plans to cover up for one another working on our secret fantasy but now as I walk down the road to your house baby there's no one there but me how I wish that I could steal your kisses just as they used to be and I wanna know Tracie, where are you now girl
I don't know why this feeling's so strong Tracie, where have you been you know there's no one now to tell us we're wrong countin' by the street lights to the phone box where we used to meet before the dawn smoking on the top floor of the school bus promising the moon as we rode along but now if I saw you across a crowded dance floor or somewhere in the town would you show me what I have been missing and spin me round and round Tracie, where are you now girl
'cause deep inside from some other place I turn to find we're there face to face we laugh, we cry, we work and we play as love filled night gives way to the day (repeat chorus)
