

Lindsay Robins, Through The Mirror

I hate the world
This beautiful world
I hate it all today
Tomorrow
Will be the same
Nothing will change
I don't understand
What is going on
My reflections talking to me
She's laughing out loud
I'm gasping for air
She's watching me drown
Through the mirror
With a smile on her face
She's watching me scream
While I'm breaking down
Through the mirror
Shivering
And all alone
No one knows me
I need
To wear more skin
To keep the truth within
I don't understand
What is going on
My reflections talking to me
She's laughing out loud
I'm gasping for air
She's watching me drown
Through the mirror
With a smile on her face
She's watching me scream
While I'm breaking down
Through the mirror
And if they believe
Everything they see
Maybe they'll leave me alone
She's laughing out loud
I'm gasping for air
She's watching me drown
Through the mirror
With a smile on her face
She's watching me scream
While I'm breaking down
Through the mirror
I hate the world
This beautiful world
I hate it all today