

Logh, The Invitation

it's happening again but this time you know it isn't real you know it's a mistake but mistakes are all you ever get once, you thought you'd found a way but now you know you should have known nothing ever rhymes and you know you should have just gone home the darkness around the corner wore her name, a name that you knew well you knew that she was trouble and you knew you just could not leave it alone and when the invitation came you knew it was an introduction to the end so this is how it ends well i guess you should have guessed it's happening again but this time there's violence in your eyes violent and strange they seem to stray as if they're always on their way but as they see her shadow edging around the corner they just don't know where to go nothing ever rhymes and you know you should just go home cold when you see that girl you get cold when you see that girl you thought that your luck would turn you always thought that your luck would turn never thought that you'd lose your nerve you never thought that you'd lose your nerve but you get cold when you see that girl

you get cold when you see that girl