

Lonewolf, River Of Life

"Wow", you say, "there's something grey out there";
- Well, sky was always there before okay, not in shimmering grey, but in clear blue but okay, that's past and forgotten, too

And cool, look there, what's swimming in this sludge ain't this fishes, or what was this word oh, they won't be swimming for a long time but who needs fishes anymore

Refrain: And your river, it flows to the sea - endlessly and the world, it turns, 'round and 'round with no demanding sound

And hey, what's this, this green thin thing oh, that's just a blade of grass you can cut it if you want, it's the last one of its kind and with steel-made houses it just doesn't count

And why can't I breath here anymore hey, who started this whole thing I thought our future's just a brilliant kind of thingso why am I dying here

Refrain

Now, there's nothing to live and to die for just a huge desert of grey sandstorms and in one or two year the earth itself will die was this, what we were living for??

Refrain
