

Lord Vicar, Pillars Under Water

Two hours since I left behind the green New England shore
Narrow-minded people of my kin were all left behind
Mighty thunder took over my ship, she could take no more
Distant shadow in the pouring rain, then lightning made me blind

Sudden glance at the Monolith locked my soul in Hell
Godly finger pointing to the sky, crowned by dark seaweed
Constructed by some hidden race before Babylon fell
Rising higher in the changing tides, an ancient evil seed

Pillars under water in blue light
Sailing forward through the silent sea
Mutilated feet dance in the night
Children of Dagon are breaking free

All this fear is far too much for me, madness eats my mind
Find my peace in underwater death, drown myself to sea
Even if I swim as fast as I can I'm not hard to find
I can feel them coming for me, in vain I try to flee

Taken back by this twisted hand I fall into nightmare
Serpent tongue, bloody boiling sea, red horror has begun
She rides with the ocean beast, blue fire in her hair
Secret veils around the open gate hide the rising sun

Pillars under water in blue light
Sailing forward through the silent sea
Mutilated feet dance in the night
Children of Dagon are breaking free