

Louis Tomlinson, Walls

nothing wakes you up like waking up alone and all that's left of us is a cupboard full of clothes the day you walked away and took the higher ground was the day that I become the man that I am now but these high walls, they came up short now, I stand taller than them all these high walls never broke my soul and I , watch them all come fallin' down I watch them all come fallin' down for you

for you

nothing makes you hurt like hurtin' who you love and no amount of words will ever be enough I looked you in the eyes saw, that I was lost for every question why you were my because

but these high walls, they came up short
now, I stand taller than them all
and I , watch them all come fallin' down

so this one is a thank you for what you did to me why is that thank-yours are so often bittersweet?
I just hope I see you one day, and you say to me: oh, oh

but these high walls, they came up short
now, I stand taller than them all
and I , watch them all come fallin' down
for you
