

Lubjan, Sara's Song

Time isn't something that slides always
With the same dull rhythm
Stay here don't move don't fear
Don't go away

Angels will come to shine in your eyes
And they will collect you
You'll learn that nothing matters, after all

You cannot eat
You cannot sleep
You're thinking of your troubles
It's time to turn those pictures to the wall

You know your heart and your desires
Will break a thousand times
A splash of rain will not dispel this hell
For tonight

You're running away
From your wildering maze of your days like a pleasant dream
And suddenly you
You can walk, return, forget and fall asleep
I won't let you down
Every single day

Cause you're my Sunday rest, my path, my song, my waited flower
When I climb above the wind to breathe
Day after day I'm waiting for your fancy and your patience
I can design your caring face
Like a flower!

You're running away
From your wildering maze of your days like a pleasant dream
And suddenly you
You can walk, return, forget and fall asleep
I won't let you down
Every single day

It's the same love that is in my bones

A tender failure to realize
What we love we are
Anyhow, anyway

You're running away
From your wildering maze of your days like a pleasant dream
And suddenly you
You can walk, return, forget and fall asleep
I won't let you down
Every single day