

Luna Halo, English Boys

I remember the way we said goodbye
And the salt from the tears that we cried
And the calls from London said that you loved me
And the calls from London said you were thinking of me

Are the English boys really that much better
Were the kisses worth the price we paid
And if I take a chance we could be together
But I don't know if all the love that you could give
Would take this pain away

Like a punch in the face I'm hit with the proof
Is it really so hard to tell the truth
You know that I would do most anything for you
But should we fight in vain for something we can change

Are the English boys really that much better
Were the kisses worth the price we paid
And if I take a chance we could be together
But I don't know if all the love that you could give
Would take this pain away