

Lynn Anderson, I've Never Loved Anyone More

Seems that I don't think about you too much
And I'm not too sure why I thought of you now
Time has a way of numbing the touch but I still recall when you left me
Just how much it hurts me to stand there just watching you leave
I couldn't believe it was true
After moments we shared and the souls that we bared I've never loved anyone more [steel]
But like I said I don't think of you much
There's someone beside me who helps me forget
He's shown me how not to think of you now but when I remember you I don't regret
That we couldn't hold on to the dreams that we shared
The dreams that were there to believe in
And for all of the pain I would love you again I've never loved anyone more
And for all of the pain I would love you again I've never loved anyone more
